Graduated taxes on newspapers and periodicals, based on the subscription price and circulation, were proposed in a bill introduced by Representative Johnson, of Washington, as a substitute for the postal zone rate system.

Philip LaFollette has done more in one day to raise the family in the estimation of the public than his father has done in the several years he has been in the Senate.

Dr. Lincoln McConnell will be here next Thursday night June 12, instead of tomorrow night. He will lecture on "The Devil and the Kaiser," with new material, at the Tabernacle.

The Hun drive is said to be halted, but it is difficult to see how the enemy can halt long in a wedge salient only twelve miles aside.

A million dollars worth of castor oil is made annually in the United States and scarcely any of it is taken with a pleasant smile.

Come off Gen. Foch, and let's try to have a double eclipse Saturday.

AERO SERVICE LETTER

Arthur Knollenberg, a brother of Ralph Knollenberg, manager of the local Kress store, is in the aviation service at San Diego in the 68th Aero Squadron. Another brother is in the same branch of the service at St. Paul. Writing to his brother from the Service Men's Club of San Diego, which is maintained by the San Diego War Camp Community Service, Arthur gives this interesting account of his experience:

San Diego, Calif., May 30, 1918.
Dear Ralph:

Was glad to get your letter so as I have a little time now, thought I would answer it. I am at the Cabrillo Club writing now. It is a club turned over to men in uniform and sure is nice up here. Dance hall, phonographs, writing tables, reading room etc.

Just got through seeing the parade here which was very good. There were men from Camp Kearny with regular field equipment, steel helmets and everything. Marines, Boy Scouts, G. A. R. sets, field artillery from Fort Rosecrans, autos etc., and about 20 aeroplanes flying above in squadron formation. We have moved everything now to our new quarters on the other end of the island and it sure is swell now. Have electric lights in our tents, real shower baths, etc. The show is o. k. Had a big feed one day last week. A turkey dinner with dressing, pie, vegetables, etc. They have steel hangers now and looks more like an army post. We got off all day today.

I have filed an application to take up flying, as they are giving enlisted men a chance. It will have to go to Washington and if I pass the physical examination which is very stiff, I will be sent to a ground school somewhere for 3 months. Then from ground school to a training school to learn to fly. If I pass o. k. I get commissioned as 2nd Lieut. It is apt to be 2 or 3 months though before I hear from it. This is the second application I have filled out, and they want to know everything from the day you were born up to the present time and a little bit more, so when they look up your record, they will be able to send you to Sing Sing instead of a ground school. The ground school which is nothing more nor less than a college where they teach you radio, machine gunnery, all about planes, motors, military dope, and many other things.

So one sure has to work hard and be pretty smart to be an aviator.

This is Luther's last week at St. Paul, then he will be sent to some field. Just which one he does not know yet. But it won't be this one.

Well guess I have told you about all so will close hoping you are well and getting along o. k.

With love to all.

Your brother,
ARTHUR.

SUBMARINE IS SUNK

HOSTILE RAIDER WAS SENT TO THE BOTTOM IN A FIGHT

(By International News Service.)

Philadelphia, June 5.—A report has just been received from Cape May, of a fight this afternoon between a United States Naval vessel and a German submarine in which the latter was sunk. No official confirmation has yet been received.

NO CHANGE OF PLANS

(By International News Service.)

Washington, June 5.—The combined effect of the enemy submarine drive in the United States waters and the recent enemy thrust in France has in no way checked or seriously impaired the United States program of war preparation.

This is the substance of a report received by President Wilson at a meeting of the War Council to-day. Troops and supplies are to go across the Atlantic on a scale steadily expanding for months to come.

MINE FIELD REMOVED

Lewis, Del., June 5.—A large mine field planted by the Germans at the mouth of Delaware Bay was cleared away by United States mine sweepers.

TEN MISSING

New York, June 5.—Ten passengers of the steamship Carolina, sunk by a submarine, are still unaccounted for, according to steamship officials.

HERE'S ANOTHER.

(By International News Service.)

Washington, June 5.—The Norwegian steamer Eidsvotl was shelled and sunk by a German submarine forty miles off the Virginia capes at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, it was learned at the Navy Department to-night. The crew was saved by an American cargo ship.

MME. LILLIAN RINGSDORF COMPANY

Mme. Ringsdorf is well known in the concert field and on the Chautauqua platform. Her charming manner, soprano voice of wide range and excellent quality, and her magnetic personality make her a prime favorite wherever she goes. Miss Marie McAdoo, pianist and harpist, is a musician of rare ability. She will play solos composed especially for the harp, and will also appear in duets and trios with the other members. Mr. F. P. Horstetter is a baritone of ability and dramatic presence. He brings to his audiences the highest type of artistry whether his selections be semi-popular or classic. Hear them at the Chautauqua.

Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Fruitt have returned from Paducah and are visiting and Mrs. Gue Breathitt. Dr. Fruitt's health is improved.

TWO MORE SCHOONERS IN THE LIST

OF VESSELS SUNK OFF THE ATLANTIC COAST—CREW OF ONE MISSING.

(By International News Service.)

New York, June 5.—Two more ships were added today to the toll of the submarine off the American coast. They were the schooners, C. C. Mengel, Jr., off the Virginia Capes Sunday and the schooner Desauss, off the Delaware Capes. The crew of the former were saved. The crew of the Desauss are missing. This brings the total up to 13, four steamships and 9 schooners.

FIVE MEN MAY VOLUNTEER

MEN IN DRAFT WANTED FOR SPECIAL TRAINING AT GOVERNMENT EXPENSE.

The Provost Marshal General has issued Call No. 630 for men of a grammar school education and with some experience along mechanical lines and some aptitude for mechanical work to be inducted into service. These men are to receive technical schooling and training at the expense of the government in specially selected schools throughout the country. They will then be used at the front and behind the lines.

Christian county is asked to furnish 5 to report at Rose Polytechnic Institute, Terra Haute, Ind., on June 15.

These men are to be selected from those registrants already eligible for military service and may volunteer until June 7th. If on June 8th 5 have not volunteered under this call the Local Board will proceed to draft the quota needed, after deducting the number of volunteers. Only white men are included in this call.

Major Rhodes advised Mrs. Gillock yesterday over the phone that the Board may enlist young men who registered yesterday. Under this arrangement there should be several who are ready to volunteer for service. This is a great opportunity for young men to get a training that will fit them for civil as well as military life.

Former Vice President Fairbanks, who died at his home in Indiana Tuesday night, was not a brilliant man but his record was such as to command the respect of even his political opponents.

Charles Warren Fairbanks, former Vice-President of the United States, was born on a farm near Unionville, Center, Union County, O., May 11, 1852. In earlier years, after taking several collegiate courses, he engaged in newspaper work while studying law. He was admitted to the Ohio bar in 1874 and later established practice at Indianapolis, where the beautiful Fairbanks home is now situated on North Meridian street. His political career dates from 1892, when he served as chairman of the Indiana Republican Convention, until after his office as Vice-President of the United States, which terminated in March, 1909. He was delegate-at-large at the Republican National Convention in St. Louis in 1896, in Philadelphia in 1900, in Chicago in 1904. It was in Chicago that he was unanimously nominated for Vice-President. He was defeated for United States Senator in 1893 by David Turple, Democrat, but later was elected from Indiana for the terms of 1897-03, 1903-09. Mr.
Fairbanks served as trustee for several colleges throughout the country and made a tour around the world in 1909-10. He gave freely to the Red Cross and the Liberty Loan issues and was reputed to be a very wealthy man.

Mr. Fairbanks has visited this city more than once as a lecturer.

Hester Proves
Her Theory

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

To be quite honest Hester was starting shamelessly at the man opposite her and the predominant sentiment in her mind as she stared was one of admiration. The man sat in a posture of dejection—his shoulders slouched forward and his chin sank down on his chest. This was not the remarkable thing for it was a natural posture for a man begrimed and smudged from his day's work at the Kingdon foundry. The remarkable thing to Hester's keen insight was that the young man did not look as if he were mentally slouching at all. His rather large, ruddy face, unshaven and blackened grotesquely, showed alertness and none of the set lines that came from long, sense-deadening drudgery in the foundry.

That night after dinner Hester sought her father, the owner and manager of the foundry, in his study. He held an open magazine in his hand, but his far-away, determined expression showed to Hester at a glance that his mind was not in the magazine but in the foundry.

"No fair having troubles you don't tell me about," she began, drawing her low chair up to his and folding the magazine that rested lightly in his hands. "If you must think about business, think out loud. I'm enormously interested—always."

Mr. Kingdon little by little admitted to his daughter that the greatest source of worry in the management of his business was more or less of a psychological nature. "It isn't flaws in the metal or shortages of fuel or transportation troubles that give me my greatest trouble. It's finding men I can trust. Sometimes, Hester, I mistrust them all. They are pulling away from me, and the man I feel the most confidence in is always the man that shows the telling weakness. If there were only a way to test the quality of men as there is to test metal then I might find men to help shoulder the responsibilities!"

Hester's animated expression showed the interest she felt. She told her father that this remark led up directly to the very thing she had in mind to ask him. Her only hobby outside of her bed of spring flowers was the study of faces. She had worked up for herself a system by which she thought she could interpret men's and women's natures and characters through their facial contour. To be sure in her twenty-two years of life in a restricted circle of associates in the town where her father's large foundry was located she had but little chance to test her theories, but though not extensive her study had been intensive. Now she asked her father for an opportunity to try it out. She told him that she could help him to find the right man for the right place in his work if she could be permitted to study the men in the factory and to test them by the standards she had worked out.

"Let me have a job as time-keeper—something so that I can see the men every day when they come to work.
They won't know who I am and they will be off their guard. I know there are men there that have the ability needed to take the positions of trust, but because you have no way of di-covering them they are wasted. They remain in the rut, doing something that is not big enough for their abilities, and other men without so much ability, through some accident or a more pushing nature, take the bigger positions. That is why they so often prove a disappointment. Why, this very afternoon I got on a crowded street car at closing time just to study the men's faces. There was one young man—shabby enough and apparently doing the crudest sort of work—but any one could see that he had ability.
There was an expression about his month—a rugged determination—that showed me what sort of a man he was.
I know I'll be able to help you. Won't you let me try?"

During the two months that followed Hester's assumption of the job of timekeeper in the foundry there were several surprising promotions and more than one enforced resignation. All that Mr. Klugdon would say when asked for an explanation was that he had been advised by an authority on personal efficiency to make the changes, and that it was due to no prejudice of his own whatever, save, of course, a perfect confidence in the ability of the efficiency expert.

Who was the efficiency expert? It was admitted that he must be a man of some shrewdness. More than one of the underlings in the office knew that the young bookkeeper who was dismissed at the time of the first change had been padding the pay roll for weeks. Apparently the dismissal was made without any knowledge of this bit of high finance, but merely as the result of the studies in personality on the part of the mysterious efficiency expert.

Most remarkable of all the changes had been the rapid rise of Peter Nor-gen. At the time the upheaval began he had been employed for two weeks as a fireman down in the boiler room, and is not especially capable fireman had he been.

Then suddenly he had been promoted. Within three weeks he was foreman of one of the departments and now, at the expiration of two months, he had a responsible position in the private office of Mr. Kingdon himself. And this in spite of the fact that young Norgen had apparently resisted all promotion, and had shown an utter lack of schooling. He had even proved his inability to write figures and for this reason had a special stenographer to take all his dictation for him. Moreover, he doggedly refused to dress as a man in Mr. King-don's private office should dress and overalls, and insisted on eating lunch with the other men in the courtyard at noon and conversing with them at closing time rather than with the men in the office departments.

No one was more puzzled than Norgen himself at his rapid rise. If he was at all pleased he did not show it.
And this was disappointing, if not to Mr. Kingdon, who had taken a fancy to the young man, then at least to the daughter on whose persistent advice Norgen had received his repeated promotions. Already in his dogged, almost surly way, he had relieved King-don of a great deal of worry. In spite of himself he was proving the rightness of the advice of the efficiency adviser.

One day Norgen came abruptly to Mr. Kingdon with his question: "Who is responsible for my promotion?" he demanded. "If there is something behind this, I ought to know." You might have supposed that he was complaining about a plot to keep him forever working as fireman rather than because of repeated promotions. "I've heard you employ an efficiency adviser. Well, I want to know on what the expert bases his conclusions." He spoke slowly and at times with broken English, though it would have been hard to determine the nationality that his accent indicated. "If you don't want to tell me, at least you ought to let me see this expert myself. It is very important."

"You have seen the expert," Mr.
Kingdon said slowly and almost solemnly. "You see the expert every day —four times a day and if I am not much mistaken you usually stop and chat with the expert for a few minutes when you come in at noon. In fact," Mr. Kingdon was looking straight into the young man's face,
"I have reason to believe that the expert occasionally meets you after hours and allows you to escort her part way home."

Norgen's face showed first dano-rance and then something—ah—to amusement. "A curious choice for an efficiency adviser—what does she know of men's abilities?" he asked.

"She picked you from the rest," was Mr. Kingdon's answer, "and you have made good. I should never have noticed you even in a dozen years. She seems to know her men and she is learning more every day. She is becoming invaluable. It's a rare gift—a sort of second sight."

"She might have found out," the young man who went by the name of Norgen said, and then he made a clean breast of the situation. As a son of a large factory owner and sure sometime to derive a large income through the operation of his own inherited plants, he had started out intent on learning at first hand the point of view of the men whose labor made possible the running of such factories. The theory that he especially wanted to prove to himself was that the men who worked for his father's plant had no show and were ground down as mere machines. He even entertained some high-blown idea of renouncing all claim to the inheritance if he could justify himself in the belief that such was the case. He had really wished to remain in the King-don factory. He took a grim pleasure in the grimness of it. And then in spite of himself, and in spite of his pretense of illiteracy his promotions had begun. Instead of being able to go back to his father with an account of the oppression of labor he would show him the rare proof of his abilities. For he was now holding down a very important position for Mr. King-don and had thoroughly mastered some of the most important phases of the large plant.

"I'm a little inclined to be angry with you," he told the girl who had been responsible for his promotions.
"Still perhaps you have done me more good than harm. You have shown me that I have, in spite of myself, a great taste for the management of this sort of plant. It has become absorbingly interesting. I couldn't give up the idea now of taking over my father's plant some day—and I had thought of giving it all up. I have learned to look at things quite differently now than would have been possible if I had remained in the hoier room as a fireman."

During the weeks that had passed when Hester had supposed him to be only one of the laborers in her father's plant she had permitted a friendship to rise between them that seldom consisted of more than a stroll homeward together at night. They never went more than five blocks together, as neither wanted the other to know where home really was. "And now that you know who I am," he said, "you aren't going to despise me?
We are none the less dear to each other, are we? I had always dreamed of marrying a girl like yourself—a girl who knows hard work, a girl of the people whose world is not bounded by the narrow conventions of leisured society."

"I'm Hester Kingdon," she said.
"What a dreadful disappointment.
Still, we might have met at any one of a dozen house parties and never should have cared a straw for each other. If I can forgive you for not being a brawny, unschooled stoker you'll have to forgive me for not being a nice little working girl."

And of course he did.

CONSTIPATION

And Sour Stomach Caused This Lady Much Suffering. Black-Draught Relieved.

Meadows, N.Y.—Mrs. Pearl Patrick, of this place, writes: "I was very constipated. I had sour stomach and was so uncomfortable. I went to the doctor. He gave me some pills.
They weakened me and seemed to tear up my digestion. They would gripe me and afterwards it seemed I was more constipated than before.

I heard of Black-Draught and decided to try it. I found it just what I needed. It was an easy laxative, and not bad to swallow. My digestion soon improved. I got well of the sour stomach, my bowels soon seemed normal, no more griping, and I would take a dose now and then, and was in good shape.

I cannot say too much for Black-Draught for it is the finest laxative one can use."

Teddington's Black-Draught has for many years been found of great value in the treatment of stomach, liver and bowel troubles. Easy to take, gentle and reliable in its action, leaving no bad after-effects. It has won the praise of thousands of people who have used it.

PROCESSION RIVAL OF PIED PIPER'S

Five Hundred Little Children, Refugees From Belgium,
Tramp Into Allied Village.

LED BY POILU TRUMPETERS

Worn by Hunger, Tired, All Sing National Anthem—Big Celebration at Evian for Them—Glad to Escape Germans.

Ervans-les-Bains.—Five hundred little children, a trifle tired-looking, perhaps a little hysterical because worn by the strain of three days on the train, tramped joyously up the street, their wooden sabots patterning a triumphant tattoo on the hard pavement, skipping some of them, to the blare of the trumpeters who led the way, and crying "Vive la France" at every welcoming tri-color. They rushed up by dozens to shake hands with anyone who was on the street to see them at five o'clock in the morning.

Each of them was dressed in his or her Sunday best, and totting a home-made pack. All the time the six old ex-Poulets trotted away on their trumpets as they led the bobbyat procession. It reminded one of the Pied Piper who piped strange tunes in Hamelin and led away all the village children when their elders refused to pay him for ridding the town of its rats.

Those trumpeters were lending Belgian children to a warm meal at Evian. Five hundred children, who had left their mothers and fathers in the land where food is scarce, were on their way to a big refuge in the old Chartreuse monastery at Le Glandier. There the Belgian government and the American Red Cross have fitted up a home for a thousand refugees.

Not Enough to Eat.

They were not orphans—just children who were not getting enough to eat. Back in Belgium a Belgian committee had picked them out as under-nourished and asked their mothers to let them go to France, where wheat and sugar are not too plenty, but where the rations are more liberal. The commission for relief in Belgium brought something to them in Belgium, but, especially since the Americans left, it had to be stretched a long way.

"Aren't you hungry?" some one asked one of the Belgian children.

"Why, no," the ten-year-old replied. "I ate yesterday."

The trumpeters piloted them to the Casino, where the women of Evian had laid out a breakfast. Six or seven children, too weak to stand the mile's walk, were carried in the big American Red Cross ambulances that transport the old men and women weekdays, when the trains bring in the French repatriates.

There was a big celebration in the Casino. The mayor of Evian made a speech, but most of the children were obviously much too tired to try to puzzle out his big words. They were much more interested in the band. The band played "The Savoyard," the anthem of Evian's mountain province, and then it played the "Brabançonne," the national hymn of Belgium.

These children stood up on the tables to applaud and wave their handkerchiefs! They knew it, every one of them, although they had not been allowed to sing it out loud for three years. Some of them were so small that they must have learned it behind closed shutters. Off in a corner half a dozen little girls joined hands and danced.

Too Tired for Candy.

But they were tired out; there were one or two who were too tired to eat the candy placed beside them—and that is very tired. And in the middle of the second verse of the "Brabançonne," one small son of Belgium laid his head on his arms and went to sleep. And before the "Marseillaise" was sung there were sleepy little groups, oblivious to the noise about them, at every table.

It was dark when they entered the Casino—much too dark for the pictures that ought to have been taken of them—and it was still very gray twilight when they came out.

One of the American Red Cross nurses who was helping care for them saw two little girls arguing sleepily about something or other.

"N'est-ce pas?" the tiniest of the two said as she came up. "C'est le matin; c'est pas le soir?"—"It is morning, isn't it? It's not evening?"

Later, when the children were passing the American Red Cross doctor, who examined them for contagious diseases the nurse learned more. Lucienne and Louise, sisters, came from near Namur. Their father had worked in a Belgian factory until the Germans took it over; then he quit. He did not get enough to eat, and last winter he died. Their mother worked in one of the municipal kitchens and made a bare living at, but not quite enough for all three—so she sent them out to France to grow fat and happy while she toils on in the soup kitchen.

Lucienne and Louise seemed a bit weepy as they told their story, but they brightened quickly. It is always morning if one is young enough. "We're going to good friends," they announced.

"Do you know where you are going?" "No," they said; "but it's sure to be like this, and they're going to be good friends."

LISTEN TO UNCLE SAM

The Government desires to impress upon all patriotic Americans that it is just as much your duty to buy your winter supply of coal AT ONCE as it is to subscribe to the Red Cross and Liberty Loans.

You should protect yourself at home against a fuel shortage this fall and winter; while at the same time you are serving our boys who are doing the fighting by releasing cars and transports for their use during the summer and winter.

IT IS IMPORTANT THAT YOU GIVE THIS YOUR IMMEDIATE ATTENTION.

Farmers cannot afford to delay getting their coal NOW, as it is as necessary as producing crops. Do not overlook an opportunity to haul a load of coal whenever you have a wagon in town.

If everyone pulls together, starts early and put their supply in now, it will avoid shortage, congestion and suffering, and will, no doubt, eliminate "Heatless Days" next winter.

The Government has designated June 3rd to 7th as the time in which to order your coal. Do not overlook this.

If you are not going to order coal please be patriotic and go to work on chopping and saving wood.

JOHN J. METCALFE,
Chairman Christian County Fuel Committee.

SHORTAGE OF FISH

DELAYS THE MAIL

Scarcity Causes Curtailment of Motive Power by Which Mail is Carried in Alaska.

Shortage of fish is interfering with the mail in Alaska. On account of their scarcity, the motive power by which the mail is carried in that cold territory is curtailed. An abundance of fish, according to a report to the post office department, is essential to the prompt delivery across the region of ice and snow, and a necessary supply is not to be had.

The mail carrier out from Anchorage, Alaska, wrote to the department under the date of March 25, 1918:

"Your letter of February 27, 1918, is at hand, and I notice the late arrivals of mail as indicated in same. The whole trouble is on account of my dogs. I was unable, and still am, to get fish for them as it is not to be obtained in the country. The dogs I use on this mail are wolf dogs that have been worked on fish all their lives. It is almost impossible to change from a fish diet to cooked feed and work them. I have done the best I could to keep this mail moving and have had to stop and rest my dogs several times while the mail was in transit as they would not stand it. . . . All of the late mails were caused on that account. . . . I have managed, however, to keep this end (Sealaska-Anchorage) running on schedule time and believe in a satisfactory manner owing to the fact that I am on the run myself, drive one of my own teams and have been able to keep it going somehow. . . . The mail is moving now better, but dogs are getting so they stand up under cooked food."

Mark Twain's Democracy.

When Mark Twain published his "A Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's Court," he made a laughing stock of civil institutions, and of the deluded mortals who uphold them. He put himself on record in a way that really did not need the events of today to vindicate.

"There is plenty good enough material for a republic," he said, "in the most degraded people that ever existed—even in the Italians—plenty of manhood in them—even in the Germans, if one could but force it out of its timid and suspicious privacy, to overthrow and trample in the mud any throne that was ever set up and any nobility that ever supported it."

At a Very Early Date.

An early English visitor to Boston recorded that "you no sooner enter a taphouse than you find a constable at your elbow who prescribes the quantity you may drink." He also mentioned getting for fourpence "a quart of cider spiced and sweetened with sugar."

Needless to Copy Others.

To do anything because others do it, and not because the thing is good, or kind, or honest in its own right, is to resign all moral control and captaincy upon yourself, and go hante to the devil with the greatest number.—Stevenson.

His System.

You Speederley—I'd like you to meet my wife, old top. I think that a bold, dashing fellow like you could get her away from me.

SOLDIERS OF WOMAN'S LAND ARMY

The comforts and pleasures of social life have been foregone by many patriotic girls who are now busy tilling the soil to raise bountiful crops for Uncle Sam. These two farmerettes riding their teams back to the barn after a strenuous day's work in the fields are members of the New Jersey division of the Woman's Land Army of America.

SAYS NAVY WAS TOO SAFE; WANTED HUBBY IN ARMY.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 4.—"I'll sign a release for him to join the army, but not the navy. It is too safe," So declared Mrs. John Bendthson, when she appeared in court against her husband, charged with non-support. After much argument Mrs. Bendthson was convinced that the navy was as dangerous as the army and she signed her husband's release.

Kentucky's quota of 25,000 nurses called for is 497. They are wanted in behalf of the nation the alarm of war to arouse the citizens to a realization of the impending danger and the necessity for self-preservation and national defense. Mr. Flowers is president of the International Lycen Association and presided over the sessions of the recent national conference of lecturers and Chautauqua managers held in Washington and addressed by members of the cabinet, foreign Ambassadors and Government officials on all the phases of the war and what should be presented to the people in the Chautauquas this season on that subject. SOLD LOVE POWDERS.

St. Louis, Mo., June 4.—Mrs. Emma Bracken, thirty, of this city, was arrested here following a report that she was offering for sale a so-called "love powder" that would enable women to win the affections of any man they sought. The direct charge against the woman is fortune telling.

Mrs. Woodson Moss, of Winchester, jumped out of a window and killed herself.

Brace Bemer, aged 15, of Vincennes, Ind., has been wounded in France.

FREE USE OF AMERICAN SLANG SIMPLY "GETS THE GOAT" OF CHICAGO WOMAN.

(By International News Service.)

Chicago, Ill., June 4.—Mrs. Howard Willett is out organizing a "Better American Speech" week, to begin October 27. The reason is, she says, that there is too much slang being spoken in America. It simply "gets her goat."

She says it is so bad that business men tell her they can't make their stenographers understand the most ordinary expressions. The girls don't know what they are talking about unless they use slang.

And the college boys—oh, my! Nothing but words gleaned from the prize first ring and the race track. Even the girls use it, too.

Mrs. Willett's taboo does not apply indiscriminately to all slang.—You can be a perfectly good wielder of American and indulge in such expressions as "beat it," "cut it out," "over the top," "camouflage," "shriek," "that gets my goat," "pep" and "lounge lizard."

But you are hopeless if you use these: "O you kid," "some girl," "O Min," "lampa," "noodle," "eoco," "pipe that" and "nut."

Anything new and bright is O. K.

Here is the motto: Speak American, think American and you will be an American. Speak better American, think better American and you will be a better American.

RED MAN ALSO LINES UP FOR FOOD CONSERVATION.

Omaha, Neb., June 4.—Indians are not one whit behind the white man when it comes to food conservation. They want their squaws to have a "food matron" just like their white brethren. Fifty leaders of the Omaha Indian tribe called on State Food Administrator G. W. Wattles and asked him to intercede with the "great white father" at Washington to have Food Administrator Hoover appoint a matron to explain to the squaws how to save the wheat by using substitutes. In the past nothing but wheat has ever been used on the reservation, but the Indians have not only sent their boys to fight for Uncle Sam, but they want to do their bit at home.

"MARSE HENRY."

The Pulitzer prize of $500 for the best editorial written in 1917, has been awarded by Columbia University to Henry Watterson. The prize was for the best editorial article written during the year; test of excellence being clearness of style, moral purpose, sound reasoning, and power to influence public opinion in the right direction. This prize was awarded for the editorial article "Vae Victis," published April 7, and the editorial "War Has Its Compensations," published April 10.

Editors of every age and capability, of every turn of literary style, of every degree of experience, published editorials on April 7. But the Courier-Journal editorial "Vae Victis" stood so high above the rest that the judges for the Pulitzer Prize have announced that this article, and its companion piece, "War Has Its Compensations," which was published April 10, have gained the palm for the year 1917.

Thus the dean of American Journalism, dealing with the greatest theme that his lifetime has presented to him, excelled all others, and he did it without the slightest consciousness; he wrote what was in his mind and heart, nor thought of other editors or prizes.

Other prizes to the amount of $3,000 were awarded for books and articles written during the year.

OFFICER'S SPIRIT ELATES BRITISH

Eagerness of the Americans to Get to the Front Is Always Noted.

MAKE THEMSELVES AT HOME

Get "on the Job" at Once and Display a Desire to Learn and to Be Where the Shells Are Whizzing.

London.—Many interesting stories come from France about the keenness of mind and the eager spirit of the American officers arriving at the front. These officers get "on the job" at once and display a desire to learn and to be where the shells are whizzing and the guns are to be seen.

The first tendency of the Britishers is to be somewhat envious of the elaborate paraphernalia and equipment of the Americans, but the disposition of the latter to share everything he has with his colleagues, be they French or British, at once puts him on a most friendly basis.

A British officer, writing in the Daily News, tells of the arrival of two of these American officers at the front. After describing an old French chateau, "full of gusts of wind, of ghosts and labyrinthine passages," he says that these two Americans lugged into the place with trunks and bags and quickly made themselves at home.

Make Themselves at Home at Once.

He describes their entrance thus: "And just then the door creaked open, and two pleasant faced young men in khaki, and wearing wide-awake hats with gold and black cord twined around them, put their heads in, looked round, bade me a pleasant good evening, looked at the pile of boxes, said they supposed this was where they were coming in, and expected, and were quite prepared to put up with hardships, and rapidly took possession."

This, then, was the American army come to stay. These young gentlemen had traveled from the other side of the Atlantic to help out the allies, and with them had come their belongings packed in trunks. Thinking, of course, of the limited number of beds, I said: "How many are there of you?" "I guess there are only two coming in here," one replied. That seemed good enough, and I said to myself: "This army has got some transportation. If a couple of lieutenants carry this lot, what must an army carry?"

"I don't regret their coming. They were nice Americans. They asked a lot of questions, and in doing so skinned me of my knowledge of the western front. And from those trunks they produced pieces of equipment which made me envious—automatic revolvers, marked with a large U. S. A., and ammunition; glasses, boots, leggings, coats, hats, mess kits, water bottles, spare tunics, flash lamps—everything. In fact, which makes our own officers when on the move look like Christmas trees. These young officers were even more the complete officer than we profess to be; but all their decorative effects were stowed and locked away in trunks. And, looking at the proposition fairly and squarely, I began to like those trunks.

Democratic Discipline.
"We settled down to work together. These American officers are of the stamp of the Canadian and Australian officer—keen, alert, good shots, and endowed with what they themselves call 'democratic discipline.' One saw this discipline at work. 'You fellows haven't got much of a place to shake down in,' one of their servants told me the morning after he had dumped his master's kit in my room, and I don't think I felt any resentment at being called a fellow.

These officers had that inevitable eagerness to wear the guns and see the inside of warfare which one finds in newly arrived British officers. And there is the same kind of speculating and guessing as to what is going to happen, when it will happen, and the chances of an early 'blitzkrieg.' But there is something more. These American officers have definite views on the war. One of them told me that he expected to find the British and French armies somewhat ragged and worn after their long struggle. What he found was just the reverse. The British army made him blink; it was so highly polished and extraordinarily smart, slick, alert and full of 'know-how.' He expected to find low morale, instead of which he finds it high. Personally I think these officers led come to criticize, but they remain to admire in amaze.

"And all this discovery leads to a certain shyness—something which is new to Yankee temperament. My two friends of the heavy baggage seemed to regard me as an expert in this war game, and an expert who had to be treated with respect. Consciously or unconsciously, they gave me an audience over them. I was the warrior, they the tyro coming on to the field of experience. One day, in a chaffing remark, I compared their lordly trunks and my little bundle of belongings, and thereafter the trunks seemed to call for constant apologies. I couldn't help watching their progress, as one watches a schoolboy growing up, and treating them as JuJuors, whose only misfortune was they had been late in coming into the field."

PRINCESS TODAY AND TOMORROW.TALENTED PLAYERS IN "LET'S GET A DIVORCE"

Among the players supporting Billie Burke in her latest photo comedy, "Let's Get a Divorce," which is based upon Sardou's celebrated play, "Divorces," are many screen players of prominence. These include John Milner, Pinna Nesbit, Armand Kalise, Helen Tracey, nearly all of whom have been in other successes in which Miss Burke has appeared.

"Let's Get a Divorce" is a delightful comedy filled with thrilling situations, rapid fire dramatic action and the theme is one of the most convincing heart appeal.

TWO HENDERSON BOYS FINISH ANNAPOLIS

ROBERT DORSEY AND DAVID CLARK, JR., WILL BE COMMISSIONED AS ENSIGNS.

Robert Dorsey and David Clark, Jr., will graduate from the United States naval academy at Annapolis, Md., on Thursday.

Both have been given a leave of absence and Dorsey will return home Friday night and Clark on Monday.

This is the first time in the history of Henderson that two of her sons have graduated same year from either the naval or military academies. They will be commissioned as ensigns.—Gleaner.

SOLDIER WEDS.

Douglas McIntosh a soldier in training at Camp Taylor stole away from his khaki clothed friends recruits and fled to Hopkinsville where he and Miss Lillian Wolfe were married Monday. The bride is a niece of Henry Wolfe at whose residence the wedding ceremony was performed by Rev. H. H. Jones. Only a select few friends were present, these being close friends and relatives of the bride and groom. The groom will return to camp Saturday.

"Kaiserism Must Be Wiped Off the Face of the Earth,"

So says President Wilson in Commenting Upon Gerard's Account of

"My Four Years in Germany""Story Will Live As Long As America is a Republic"

Mayor Jewett of Indianapolis, and Mayor Smith, of Louisville, Also Highly Commend Work of American Ambassador.

Washington D. C.—Following a special performance given here tonight of Ambassador Gerard's photoplay story, "My Four Years in Germany," given to help the latest Liberty Loan, President Wilson said:

"Let every American see 'My Four Years in Germany', and Kaiserism will soon be wiped off the face of the earth. This picture will live as long as America is a Republic."

Other prominent Government officials had similar words of praise for the truly wonderful picturization of Ambassador Gerard's own story—a story based on facts and not fiction.

It is hoped of the sponsors for this photoplay that the picture will be seen by every man, woman and child in America, so that all of us can better appreciate just why we are at war.
